DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 100-104 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter, which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.
2. The claimed recitation of "spring that does not ...alloy" is without basic in disclosure as filed.
3. It present the basis should be pointed out. The statement in Remarks, page 10, and lines 24-28 does not point out proper basis for the limitation of absence of the alloy in the body.
4. Claims 26, 33, 36, 41, 42, 48, 73-85, 87, 89-92, 94-104 (all pending claims) are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Faraci in view of Fjelsted, Abys, Yanof and Littlebery.
5. See discussion in last office action.
6. Claims 26, 33, 36, 41, 42, 73-85, 87, 98-92, 94-104 (all pending claims) are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Beaman (982) in view of Fjelstad, Abys, Yanof and Littebury.
7. See discussion in last office action.
8. Applicant's arguments filed with the amendment have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. See response to argument in last office action, paragraph 3. Basically Yanof, Littebury and Faraci disclose use of palladium for probe type with Fjelsted referring to use of palladium alloys, column 3, and lines 60-65. While Littlebury and Yanof only mention palladium it is believed that they are inherently disclosing use of its alloy since it is believed that the material is typically used in alloy form rather than in pure form. The patents suggest use of palladium or its alloy for a probe tip. The selection of a specific palladium alloy, with no allegation of a new result produced by such choice does not avoid the rejection. Abys is not essential to the rejection, but is applied only for teaching that palladium cobalt is useful in electrical contacts hence is seen to suggest that alloy for consideration as proper material for other electrical contacts. As to argument on paper 12, lines 15-29, while advantage need not be disclosed, the use of a specific palladium alloy that does not appear to produce any new result over the prior art palladium and palladium alloy uses does not provide basis for patentability. Basically, since Fjelstad, taken with the other secondary references, suggests palladium or one of its alloys for contact tip material and one of the known alloys is palladium cobalt, the use of that material for the main reference contact tips should be found an obvious variation. For claims 94, 95, 99, note that no arguments are presented; are there claims at issue?

9. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
